Michelle Jhon

Academic Writer | Nursing & Education Content

Professional Profile

I’m an academic writer with a strong interest in nursing education, academic research, and student-focused content. My work involves researching detailed subjects, organizing ideas, and developing clear and well-structured academic writing. I enjoy taking complex information and presenting it in a way that feels natural, practical, and easy to understand.

Professional Experience

Academic Writer — Nursing Writers UK

I work on research-based and educational content related to nursing and higher education. My responsibilities include researching academic topics, developing written content, reviewing structure and clarity, and helping ensure that material is accurate, original, and aligned with academic expectations.

Through this work I have gained experience with nursing essays, assignments, case studies, care plans, dissertations, research proposals, personal statements, and other academic content. I also contribute to student-focused resources designed to make challenging academic subjects easier to understand.

Core Skills

- Academic research and information gathering
- Nursing and healthcare-related academic writing
- Essay, assignment, dissertation, and proposal writing
- Academic editing and proofreading
- Content organization and clear presentation
- Research-based educational content
- Understanding university-level academic requirements

Areas of Experience

Nursing education • Academic research • Nursing assignments • Case studies • Care plans • Dissertations • Research proposals • Personal statements • Childcare and disability-related academic topics

Professional Approach

I take a careful and practical approach to every project. I believe good academic writing should be accurate without being unnecessarily complicated. My focus is on clear communication, thoughtful research, logical structure, and content that provides genuine value to students and readers.

Career Highlights

My experience across different nursing and academic projects has helped me strengthen my research, writing, editing, and critical-thinking abilities. Working with students and academic content has also given me a better understanding of the challenges learners face and the importance of clear academic guidance.

Note

This resume is intentionally kept simple and natural and includes only professional information established from our previous conversations. Contact details, formal qualifications, dates, and specific employment claims have not been added because they were not previously provided.